

So in the interests of promoting good news, here is another piece. Hank Boerner, columnist with this magazine for the last twelve years, is well known nationally and internationally for his work in corporate governance. In September 2011 he was named to the National Association of Corporate Directors (NACD) list of 100 "People to Watch," in recognition of his outstanding "commitment to NACD's mission of promoting board diversity and boardroom excellence by his more than 30 years of involvement in corporate governance affairs." The fact that he was named to a list of "People to Watch" of course suggests that the NACD think that the best is yet to come. Here at Corporate Finance Review, we think so too. Congratulations, Hank, on an honor richly deserved. And here's to the next ten years. ■
